

Local Bank does its Part to Help 2008 Hurricane Victims.

Executive National Bank brings community together to provide relief to those in Haiti.

Miami, FL September 26, 2008 – In the wake of four major storms that have struck the island in the last few weeks, the people of Haiti have been left to cope with millions of dollars in damages and a shortage of vital supplies.

Executive National Bank has partnered with Notre-Dame D’Haiti Catholic Church to collect supplies for Hurricane Ike victims in Haiti. The locally owned and operated bank encouraged employees and customers to participate, establishing collection points at its branches throughout Miami-Dade County.

“It makes me feel good to work for a community bank that looks to help those in need,” said Ana Garcia, Executive Vice President of Lending, while unloading relief supplies at the bank’s main branch in Kendall.

In only two weeks, the drive has amassed enough canned food, dry goods, clothing, shoes and school supplies to fill a quarter of the Notre-Dame D’Haiti Catholic Church cargo truck. One of the largest international relief organizations in the United States, Food for the Poor, will coordinate the shipment of these relief supplies to Haiti. Food for the Poor stands out from its peers with 97% percent fundraising efficiency. Distribution of the donations will be coordinated from within the island by the Episcopal Conference of Bishops to ensure that all areas affected by the storms receive substantial relief.
